The hardest subject in school to me is science. Science has always been a little bit of a struggle for me. Science doesn't make as much sense to me as the other subjects do. I've always thought that other subjects have been easier. A way that I can improve in science is to study more. Another way I can improve is by reading books and watching videos about science topics. In conclusion, science is the hardest subject in school to me.

Emery Berry, 6th, Rye Cove Intermediate, Ms. Livesay

My most difficult subject in school is math. I can improve by practicing at home. I can practice multiplication and division.

Kyra Thompson, 2nd, Mount Carmel Elementary, Mrs. Short

My most difficult school subject is reading. I can improve by reading more. I will start practicing. I will read at school and at home. I will read my library book at home. Wild Animals is my library book. I will also read the newspaper. When I do these things, I get better.

Willie Neeley, 2nd, Hilton Elementary, Ms. Edwards

As soon as I started sixth grade, I found out I was struggling in math. We were studying ratios and percentages and I was very confused. I was afraid I was not going to do well on the first test. Finally, I decided to go to afternoon tutoring to get help in math. After attending tutoring just a few times, I made a one hundred on my math test.

Abigail Humphrey, 6th, Elydale Middle, Mrs. Smith

Math is my most difficult subject ever. I would like to be able to use my brain to count instead of my fingers. I don't like counting backwards and subtracting.

Sofia Mitchell, 2nd, Nickelsville Elementary, Mrs. Gilmer

My hardest subject is science. What I can do to improve at science is make sure to study. Another way to get better at science is to try my hardest. Another way to improve at science is to ask the teacher for help. The last way I can improve at science is to plan a way to make it fun and easy.

Guadalupe Alvarez, 6th, Rye Cove Intermediate, Ms. Livesay

My most difficult school subject is science. To improve in science, I could take notes. I could study with a friend. I can ask the teacher to slow down.

Waylon Hale, 6th, JW Adams Combined, Mrs. Salyers

Which is your most difficult school subject?

My most difficult subject in school is math. Regrouping is hard for me because the numbers we add are hundreds numbers. We do tests on it about two to three times a week. Maybe if I study more, I will get better. That is the only way I know to get better. Do you know another way to get better? If you do, tell me please.

Andra Ketron, 3rd, Shoemaker Elementary, Mrs. Johnson

I think math because it's so early in the morning and I get very tired in that class. I would like it to be later like at 8:00 AM or 9:00 AM. I would also like the lights to be a little darker because they hurt my eyes.

Abigail Seals, 6th, Pennington Middle, Ms. Lambert

I am struggling in geography. I don't really know how to read maps. It is so confusing. but my teacher is teaching us really well and helping us learn. We have the test today and I think I'm going to do well. I think my classmates are too!

Lola Rush, 3rd, Mount Carmel Elementary, Mrs. Whited

My most difficult subject is social studies because I barely learned about it in 4th grade. But this year I think I have improved already because I've been reading and learning about it more!

Scout Wallace, 5th, Jonesville Middle, Mrs. Davis

Ugh! American history is my worst subject. I like it but when it comes to tests, well, I usually fail. I like reading about it but when my teacher asks questions about it, it's hard. I help myself by reading and listening. You never fail until you give up.

Abbie Smith, 4th, Miller Perry Elementary, Ms. Jeffers

My most difficult subject is reading. I can improve by reading daily.

Addilyn Cochrane, 2nd, Nickelsville Elementary, Mrs. Gilmer

English is my most challenging subject. To improve, I plan to study, listen to my teacher, and complete homework. I think I can improve by doing classwork and following the rules. I also think I can improve by reading and doing summaries.

Connor Delph, 7th, Union Middle, Ms. Honeycutt

If I had to choose one subject that I struggle with the most it would be Civics and Economics class. Some reasons why would be document names. Sometimes 2 or 3 documents sound very alike, so in class I can really struggle with which one it is. Another one would be in certain documents the reasoning for them is very similar, so I get them confused with others. That can usually lead me to get questions wrong as well. Finally, one of the last reasons would be because I have a lot of trouble with remembering the names of the articles, much less the name of the author. Those would be some of the main reasons I struggle with Civics and Economics class.

GlennaRae Lawson, 7th, Union Middle, Ms. Honeycutt

My most difficult school subject is math. I can improve by doing more math. Math was hard for me but now I have improved my skills by practicing math. Now I believe in myself and I am so good at it now. So, I will never give up. This is how I have improved by doing math.

Elaina Smith, 2nd, Hilton Elementary, Ms. Edwards

I struggle with science a lot. I don't really know why I struggle with this subject, but I know I can improve by studying the science book we have. This science book is so important to use. Another thing I can do is research things I don't understand. Hopefully, I can study a lot more than I used to. AND I will definitely study the science book a lot more.

Vanessa Horne, 6th, Rye Cove Intermediate, Ms. Livesay

My most difficult school subject is reading. To improve in reading, I could ask for help. I could sound out my words carefully. I could practice reading because practice makes perfect!

Karly Phillips, 6th, JW Adams Combined, Mrs. Salyers

Have you ever had a difficult class in school? Well, I had one; it was keyboarding and some lessons were hard. Coding is fun but it is a little hard. The class teaches you about the "home row". It is just a row that you start on, but it was easy. What I am trying to say is try your best and do not give up on your dreams.

Eli Jones, 7th, Elydale Middle, Mrs. Yeary

Hey, there! Are you struggling in ELA? I am too. I can show you what I do to get better at ELA. First, look at older books for some old words you can learn about and that expands your vocabulary. Then, pay more attention in ELA. Try to study more and put more effort into it. My final trick to help you in ELA is to get flash cards. These will help you review and learn. So, that's how I am trying to improve in ELA. Hope you like my tips and tricks. I'm going back to studying. See you later!

Bryson Swatzell, 4th, Miller Perry Elementary, Ms. Jeffers

My hardest class right now is the band. It is really difficult to read music.

Keydon Edgar, 6th, Pennington Middle, Ms. Lambert

My most difficult subject is math. To improve I could study more at home or practice on worksheets. I also could just ask for help from my teacher, and one more thing I could do is I could go back and check my work or redo the equation.

Arianna Lundy, 5th, Jonesville Middle, Mrs. Davis
